THE SERVICEMEMBERS CIVIL RELIEF ACT OF 2003

SEC 2. PURPOSE.

The purposes of this Act are:

- (1) to provide for, strengthen and expedite the national defense through protection extended by this Act to servicemembers of the United States to enable such persons to devote their entire energy to the defense needs of the Nation; and
- (2) to provide for the temporary suspension of judicial and administrative proceedings and transactions that may adversely affect the civil rights of servicemembers during their military service.

The information presented in this brochure gives an overview of SCRA and is not to be considered legal advice.

It's important for you to know about the protections that congress has granted you as you serve the nation in the global war on terror.

On December 19, 2003 the President signed into law a completely updated Soldiers and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940. This law helps ease the economic and legal burdens on military personnel called to active duty status in Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom. SCRA provides certain legal protection for individuals called to active duty. Relief extends to actions terminating leases, evictions, foreclosures, and repossessions, default judgments, lowers interest rates on credit cards and loans and protects against lapses or termination of insurance policies.

Who is protected?

Active duty members of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force and Coast Guard including Reserves and National Guard activated under title 10 orders and National Guard activated for training for more than 30 days under 32 USC § 502(f) and commissioned officers of the Public Health Service and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Also covered are dependents, including your spouse and children and any other person for whom you provided at least 50% support for 180 days prior to applying for relief under SCRA.

SCRA also protects persons whom you may have had co-sign loans and other contracts and prevents courts from enforcing bail bonds if your service precludes your appearance in court.

To what and where does SCRA apply?

Any civil judicial or administrative proceeding in any and all federal, state or local courts whether or not a “court of record” and all administrative agencies, such as motor vehicle administrations, in any state, locality, territory or other political subdivision of the United States. SCRA does not cover criminal matters.

If you can't make your mortgage payment

SCRA can provide temporary relief from paying a mortgage. You must show that:

- you obtained the mortgage before going on active duty;
- you owned the property prior to entering military service;
- you still own the property; and
- your service materially affects your ability to pay the mortgage.

If you need to break a lease

You may lawfully terminate a lease, including for automobiles, on entering active duty. You must have PCS orders or be activated for a minimum of 90 days (180 days for automobiles). To do this you must show:

- the lease was entered into prior to going on active duty;
- the lease was signed by you or by someone else on your behalf; and
- you are currently on active duty.

If you are being evicted for non-payment of rent

SCRA does not excuse you from paying rent. If you can show that your active duty status materially affects your ability to pay rent for yourself or your dependents, a court MAY stay eviction proceedings, usually for 3 months, if:

- your landlord is attempting to evict you during a period of active duty or after receipt of orders to report;
- the rented premises is being used for housing by your spouse, children or other dependents; and
- your monthly rent is less than $2465 (2004).

If you can't appear in court or at administrative proceedings

If you have a court date or have an administrative hearing or other proceeding, and can't appear because you are on active duty, the court or administrative agency MUST postpone the date for a minimum of 90 days if you:

- request a delay in writing;
- explain in your request why your active duty status affects your ability to appear;
- give a date when you can appear; and
- include a letter from your commanding officer stating that you are on active duty and you are not allowed to leave on the scheduled date.

You may request additional delays after the first 90-day delay and if the court denies, an attorney must be appointed to represent you.

Default judgment protection

A default judgment is where you have failed to answer a civil complaint or other legal process (enter an appearance) and a court makes a decision in your absence. If you have a default judgment entered against you while you are on active duty, or for 60 days thereafter, you may request to have it set aside if you:

- show that you were prejudiced by not being able to appear; and
- you can show that you have “good and legal” defenses to the claims against you.

You must ask the court to reopen your case within 90 days of release from active duty.

6% Cap on Interest Rates

If you have mortgage, installment or credit card debt and you can show that your active duty materially affects your ability to make payments, you may request that your creditors lower your interest rates to 6 percent. The difference will be permanently forgiven. You must have acquired the debt prior to entering active duty. To request this reduction:

- write a letter to each creditor asking for the reduction under the SCRA;
- state that your military service materially affects to ability to make payments; and
- attach a copy of your activation orders.

If the creditor refuses to lower the interest rate and the matter goes to court, the burden of proof is on the creditor to show that your active duty does not materially affect your ability to make timely payments.

Life insurance premiums

The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) may guarantee the payment of premiums for certain commercial life insurance policies while you are on active duty and for two years thereafter. You will not be required to pay premiums during that period, and the coverage will remain in force up to $250,000, but you will be required to pay the premiums back within two years.

To learn more about this benefit, see the VA Life Insurance for Veterans and Servicemembers Handbook by visiting:

Health insurance

You may have the right to reinstatement of non–employer provided health insurance policies that lapsed while you were on active duty. The insurance must have been in effect prior to you entering active duty and have lapsed during your period of service. To apply for reinstatement under SCRA, write a letter to your insurance carrier and attach a copy of your activation orders.

State income taxes

SCRA prohibits states from taxing your military pay and personal property if your presence in the state is due solely to your active duty. The state is also prohibited from using the pay of the nonresident servicemembers to increase the state income tax of your spouse.

UNIFORMED SERVICES EMPLOYMENT AND REEMPLOYMENT RIGHTS ACT

Reemployment Rights

If you left your job for service in the armed forces, you may have rights to return to that job under a law called the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act (USERRA).

USERRA provides numerous protections allowing service members to retain civilian jobs upon reporting back from military service and prevents adverse employment actions by employers if the actions are motivated in part by the employee's military service.

The employment rights offer protection from discrimination on the basis of a person's prior service (veterans), current obligations (Guard and Reserve), or intent to join the service. The reemployment rights offer returning service members reinstatement of pre-service civilian employment. The employer must restore an eligible service member's employment with the same status and seniority as if employment had been continuous. Reemployment rights extend to persons who have been absent from a position of employment because of service in the uniformed services.

The U.S. Department of Labor Veterans Employment and Training Service investigates USERRA complaints. More information on USERRA can be found at: www.dol.gov/elaws/evets.htm.
